The Search for New Trade Routes
> 1400s: European countries looked for new trade routes to the Orient.
Treasured Oriental silk, perfumes, drugs,
gold, jewels, dyes, teas, and spices (pepper, cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves) were sough	nt.
In searching for a shorter route to the Far East they instead landed on the South and
North American continents.

Spain in the New World

- Ponce de Leon (1513) landed in what is now Florida.
- Balboa crossed the Isthmus of Panama to reach the Pacific Ocean.
- Cortés (1519) landed in present-day Mexico and in 1521 conquered Aztecs.
- Nárvaez (1527) made an unsuccessful expedition to the Cape of Florida which led to his death; one of his colleagues, Cabeza de Vaca, survived, and wrote of his travels in the southwest, encouraging more exploration.

Spain in the New World: Francisco Vásquez de Coronado

- "Seven Cities of Cibola" was a false report of houses of gold and turquoise.
- Coronado led an expedition (1000 men, 1500 horses & mules, and numbers of cattle & sheep) to find the Seven Cities.
- His exploration was a financial disaster yet a large territory was claimed for Spain.
- Coronado and troops followed a route through Oklahoma Panhandle on their

Juan de Oñate

- In 1595, Juan de Oñate was given the job of settling New Mexico, mainly to spread Catholicism.
- 1598: he established San Juan de los Cabelleros (first Spanish settlement in Nuevo Mexico).
  1601: more legends of gold brought Oñate
  to Oklahoma.
- He helped open the door to the multitude of changes to come.
