for Georgia Students

AUTHOR

Lee Ann Caldwell is a native Georgian. She obtained her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in history at the University of Georgia. She has taught history at Paine College, Augusta University, and Georgia College & State University, where she was chair of the Department of History, Geography, and Philosophy.

In 2008, she became the Director of the Center for the Study of Georgia History at Augusta University. She has taught US and Georgia history for over twenty-five years.

Dr. Caldwell has presented papers at many professional conferences, and her research has appeared in scholarly journals, in books, and in encyclopedias. She has served on the executive boards of the Georgia Association of Historians and the Southern Association for Women Historians. She is a past president of the Georgia Association of Historians and co-editor of its journal. She has also worked with public school teachers in Teaching American History Grant programs and other workshops.

Dr. Caldwell is actively involved in the community. She has served on boards of arts organizations, civic groups, and historical and preservation societies. She is a 1980 graduate of the Leadership Augusta Program, the recipient of its Outstanding Leadership Award, and continues to teach its History Day each year. She is also a graduate of Leadership Georgia. Her work was recognized in 2008 with the Georgia Governor's Award in the Humanities and in 2011 by the Georgia Association of Historians with the Piper Award for Distinguished Service.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book on our state reflects the knowledge, efforts, and talents of many. First, I am thrilled that my colleague, political scientist Dr. Gwen Wood, agreed to write the six chapters on Georgia's government. Her expertise in political science and government was exactly what the book needed. I am very grateful to Dr. Douglas Oetter, Professor of Geography at Georgia College & State University, for his reading and input on Chapter 1. My appreciation also goes to retired anthropologist Dr. Christopher Murphy, Augusta University, for his expertise on Native Americans.

I was fortunate in my graduate program at the University of Georgia to have studied with some of the outstanding historians in the field of Georgia and southern history: G. Melvin Herndon, Kenneth Coleman, Phinizy Spalding, F. N. Boney, and William Holmes. I thank them for sharing their knowledge and wisdom with me. In my career, I have also been influenced by wonderful colleagues and students whose research, presentations, articles, and books have added to my knowledge of and insight into Georgia's past. I especially appreciate the understanding of African American history I have gained from Dr. Leslie J. Pollard, retired Callaway Professor of History at Paine College.

A major source of ongoing inspiration was my late friend and mentor Dr. Edward J. Cashin, Jr., founder of the Center for the Study of Georgia History, and one of the most prolific scholars in Georgia history. His life's work, reflected in over twenty-five books, added so much to what we know about our story. It is to him that this text is dedicated.

No one undertakes a work of this magnitude without a supportive family, and I thank them. I am forever grateful to my husband Richard Swann who kept the home fires burning and provided unflagging encouragement.

Introduction

elcome to the story of Georgia, past and present. This book is designed to help you achieve several goals: (1) to learn about the geography, government, economy, and history of our state; (2) to gain a new appreciation of your state's assets—its land and resources, its people, and its accomplishments; (3) to recognize the state's uniqueness while also seeing how it fits into the larger context of the region, nation, and increasingly the world; (4) to understand the problems and challenges the state faces and have the desire to become part of the solution; (5) to realize that decisions you make affect not only you but others, sometimes many others; and (6) to know that our state has been an important participant in the story of our country.

We begin our study with the land since environment is a key factor in how we live and how we make our living. Next, the chapters on government will help you understand that in the not-too-distant future you will hold a most important political role, one of great responsibility in the state and nation—citizen. Citizens must know how their government works since the informed participation of citizens is crucial to a well-functioning society.

Finally, we go on a journey through Georgia's history. Did you ever wonder what happened in the very place where you now live if you could go backwards in time fifty years, or one hundred, or a thousand? History is that study of place through time. The legacy of past events and people is all around us—in the landscape, the buildings and monuments, the place names, the writings, the laws, the culture and customs. Understanding our past, both the good and the bad, helps us know why things are the way they are today.

Through this study, you are not only learning information, you are learning how to think. You will be able to see how causes lead to effects; you will learn to uncover patterns over time; you will learn that big changes sometimes start small. You will also come to understand that what we do in the present is part of the continuity of the story. As we make history, we should strive to create a heritage that helps Georgia reach its full promise as a wonderful place to live both in the present and in times yet to come. So, welcome to Georgia Studies for Georgia Students.
